“When Sunshine Turns to Snow”ball Relay

No matter the season, you can still enjoy a little “snow” inside. You can do this with your family, a group of friends, or as a whole class in school.

You’ll need white tissue paper/large cotton balls/bean bags – “snowballs”, Body Parts poster, and something to mark a turnaround point (i.e. a cone, piece of tape, etc)

Instructions: Separate into relay teams. Each team will need a pile of 5 “snowballs”. Before you begin, the teacher/group leader/etc. will fill out the Body Parts poster with five different body parts.

For each round of the relay race, teams will take turns carrying the snowball to the turn around point and back using only the body part listed on the poster. The process continues until each team member has completed all five rounds (1 round for each body part). The first team to complete all five rounds wins.

For an added challenge, add a movement to be done with each body part. For example: hold the snowball between your knees while galloping.

Ice Queen v. _____

Choose one other adaptation of The Snow Queen to compare and contrast with Ice Queen.

It could be a film adaptation, a book adaptation, or a ballet adaptation. What was similar and what was different between the two? What did you like and dislike about both? How is the story told in both versions you are choosing to compare? Did you prefer one over the other? Why or why not?

Your analysis can be done verbally, like a conversation with a friend or family member. It could be a written analysis. Or it could be a visual analysis.

Frozen Hot Chocolate

This movement game is a twist on the classic Mirror Game. It is a game of opposites and centers around focus and improvisational skills. It can be done with you and someone at home or with a group of friends or in a classroom setting. Visit this link for instructions on how to play the Mirror Game. If you are new to the game, try doing the Mirror Game as is first.

Once you feel comfortable with the Mirror Game, now add the challenge of playing Frozen Hot Chocolate. You will need one person to act as the Facilitator.

Frozen Hot Chocolate begins as the Mirror Game. When the facilitator calls out “Marshmallows” the follower will now do the opposite of what the leader is doing. This can be open to the followers’ interpretation.

For example: if the leader raises their right hand, the follower could raise their own right hand (instead of mirroring with the left), or their knee, or move at a different tempo or with a different movement quality. When the facilitator calls out “Whipped Cream”, players switch roles.

Family Movie Night

Grab the popcorn and a cup of hot cocoa for an Ice Queen family movie night! Check out the many adaptations of Hans Christian Andersen's The Snow Queen. A classic crowd pleaser is Disney's Frozen. You may also like the 1995 British animated film The Snow Queen featuring the voice talents of Helen Mirren and Hugh Laurie or the 2005 BBC live action film The Snow Queen featuring Patrick Stewart and Juliet Stevenson.
